Today’s multi-talented woman often needs a quiet retreat of her own where she can not only relax but also pursue a number of her special craft interests. This narrow, north-facing porch has thus been transformed, through the use of bright colors and unique design, into a delightfully sunny and cheerful area just perfect for creating that cozy ambiance so essential for such activities. Moreover, the adjacent garden complements the style and setting of the porch and demonstrates how horticultural knowledge and sound design can be combined to provide a pleasurable haven of beauty and serenity. The overall result is a splendid example of balanced property design — the ultimate objective.

Carlton Mews

Serenity, beauty, antiquity and solitude describe the Old English Garden at Carlton Mews adjacent to the Designers’ Showhouse property. Nestled in a corner of the garden is the original stable of the Stephen A. Ginna farms, now a private residence.

Built around 1862, the barn was converted into a home by Mr. and Mrs. William Sloane Lare, who sought the help of Henry G. Osterman to landscape the barnyard in 1922. Over the years the beautiful effect we enjoy today has been achieved by the continual efforts of Henry’s son George and George’s sons Kenneth and Alfred.

The pathways leading to the large piazza and its floor are laid with terracotta tiles hand-kilned in the 1880s that were taken from Mr. Ginna’s rose trellis, which extended from Watchung Avenue to Putnam Avenue. The picture windows of the house were the carriage doors, and the original weathervane atop the roof bears the Ginna G.

The garage on the property, formerly a tack house, was relocated from Kensington Avenue and is surrounded by hawthorne and evergreen trees.

In 1965 George Osterman designed the sundial garden and the herb garden for the present owner, Lucy M. Rose. Thirty species of herbs are cultivated, dried and used for cooking year after year.
